ABOUT IPRA

The International Pro Rodeo Association is proud to celebrate 57 years of rodeo excellence. Founded in 1957 by two rodeo promoters, the Interstate Rodeo Association, IRA, was formed as a rodeo management organization and a sanctioning body.

From big cities to small towns, from major league stadiums to portable arenas, the IPRA has become the sports second largest professional rodeo association sanctioning nearly 300 rodeos. The IPRA has a membership base of over 2,400 members.

The International Professional Rodeo Association (IPRA) is the second-largest American rodeo organization in the world. It sanctions rodeos in the United States and Canada, with members from those countries, as well as others. Its championship event is the International Finals Rodeo (IFR), held every January in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The IPRA has been sanctioning rodeos for over 50 years in cities of all sizes.

With their focus on the future of the association and the industry of rodeo, the IPRA's leaders have their eyes trained on growth and expansion. Expanding the association into new geographic areas as well as expansion in sponsorship markets are both key factors in the future of the IPRA.

Oubre Rodeo Company is our official stock contractor producing more than 20 rodeos annually for IPRA. Owned by husband and wife team Bubba and Becky Oubre, ORC has top ranked livestock, professional personnel and some of the sport's most impressive athletes.
